Monthly Commentary

Greater China markets bounced back strongly in March. The Chinese A-share market and Taiwan were strong performers for the month. The GCA Greater China Fund was +1.86% for the month. The fund volatility is 11.39% vs 28.32% for the index. The fund's Sharpe ratio since inception is 0.70 and the fund's alpha is 0.08. Stocks that performed well for the month included on the long side Zijin Mining and on the short side Huaneng Power.

Last month we thought global markets were oversold and had the potential for a bear market rally. Equity markets in general have performed exceedingly well since the second week of March. Riskier assets and more economically sensitive sectors like commodities have been the best performers. The current rally has been supported by economic data that has been marginally better than expected. However, the economic outlook for the rest of 2009 still looks challenging. We do not see signs of a sustainable economic recovery globally.

This will restrain economic growth in emerging markets and limit earnings potential of the companies we look to invest in these markets. We added long exposure when the markets were oversold, but have cut back exposure after the bounce back. We might have been early given the continuing strength in equity markets. However, we maintain our focus on limiting risk to the portfolio until we are convinced of a sustainable improvement in the economic outlook.

Strategy

Investment objective is to achieve optimal, risk adjusted, absolute returns (ann. target return >15% and ann. target volatility <15%) while maintaining a public indice correlation <40%. Fund combines bottom-up sector/company analysis (alpha generation) and top-down macro derivatives overlay (beta risk management). Additional alpha derived from cross-BRIC trading emanating from GCA’s BRIC fund platform. Fund utilizes all asset classes (equities, fixed income, derivatives & options and foreign exchange) and assets are dynamically managed across Greater China markets (China, Hong Kong and Taiwan). Fund also invests in company securities listed on other international exchanges and accesses China’s fastest growing mid-cap sector by way of its on the ground investment team. Fund adheres to “best of breed” AIMA compliant risk controls and governance practices.
